A friend of the Wombles once joked that they should name their children after the herbs parsley and sage as to complete a parody of the Simon & Garfunkel album title, “Parsley, Sage, Rosemary, and Thyme.” After buying the property in their children’s names, the couple decided to call it ParsleySage. The house belonged to the couple’s long-time friends and neighbors, Dean and Marguerite Williams. After the elderly couple moved away, the Wombles purchased the house to preserving their fond memories and making new ones. The Wombles remodeled the house last summer and turned it into a guest home. The house can be found on VRBO.com with the Batesville listings.

The brick-walled room is a hallway and an access way to the side porch which was formerly a part of the old porch. The Wombles kept the original exterior brick walls and added new wood flooring.

The house has three bedrooms and one master bedroom. The rooms are decorated with art and furniture from the 'Wombles' collection.

The house has one master bath and one main bath. Both baths have the original tubs. The couple remodeled the main bath and added new appliances.

Across from the kitchen is the front door sitting area with a picnic table in the corner. This large room was originally two rooms, a living room and a dining room. The Wombles removed the wall to open the area so their guests would have more space.

The Wombles completely remodeled the kitchen, including new counter tops and appliances.

The front half of the house was built in 1954 with the back half addition finished in the 60's. The Wombles were neighbors of the Williams family for more than 20 years.

 MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

The chest stationed by the front door was originally Ms. Williams. It is the only piece of furniture that belonged to neighbors and very dear to the Wombles. Today, it proudly presents the guest book for visitors to sign.
